MANAGER'S COMMENTS

Review

In the month of July, both MGS/GII benchmark yields were broadly lower across the curve amid renewed US-China trade war tensions coupled with continued dovish rhetoric from other central banks and lower global yield environment.

Local government sukuk/bond yield curve flattened further in July with both the 20y/3y and 10y/3y spreads tightened to 70 bps from 77bps in June. Both the 3-y and 10-y yields fell to their multi-year low at 3.27% and 3.57% respectively.

Overall, investors were still seen extending duration in search of higher yield space. Local government sukuk/bonds rally further supported by the strong demand from foreign investors as they continued their yield-hunting activities amid the dovish sentiment.

On monthly basis, the MGS/GII yield curve fell by 3 bps to 12 bps from previous month's closing.

Investment Outlook & Strategy

BNM maintained the OPR at 3.00% at the 4th MPC meeting on the 9th July 2019, stating monetary policy remains accommodative while it continues to monitor risks to inflation and domestic growth.

BNM is seen to preserve the degree of monetary accommodativeness and focus on considerable downside growth risks that are seen to emerge in both domestic and global fronts. We expect the OPR to likely remain unchanged at 3.00% for the rest 2019, even if risk of worsening global trade outlook may increase the downside risks on interest rate cut to another 25bps in 2020.

Key headwinds to growth include the external sector as the global outlook weakens and potential commodity-related supply disruptions. FTSE Russell WGBI is still a key risk factor for 2H 2019: The decision by FTSE Russell on whether to maintain Malaysia in World Government Bond Index (WGBI) is a major factor that will drive the direction of foreign flows in 2H 2019. There are 3 possible scenarios 1) Remain in WGBI, 2) Stay in the watch list and 3) exclude from the WGBI. If the worst scenario plays out, we foresee there will be about RM15-20 billion of foreign outflows from MGS.

Despite the above, ringgit sukuk/bonds are expected to overcome the above hurdles with yields to decline further in August, similar to June-July period as both local and foreign investors showed confidence in the ability of the regulators to deepen and provide better liquidity in both bond and Ringgit market. We expect corporate sukuk/bonds yields to compress further also due to demand from yield-hunt and scarcity of supply as well as effect from low interest rate environment.

Meanwhile, the moderating global conditions, unresolved trade tensions and softer business sentiment could affect domestic activity. Having said, we expect domestic demand will continue to provide some relief in addition to higher private investment to continue supporting headline growth in 2019.

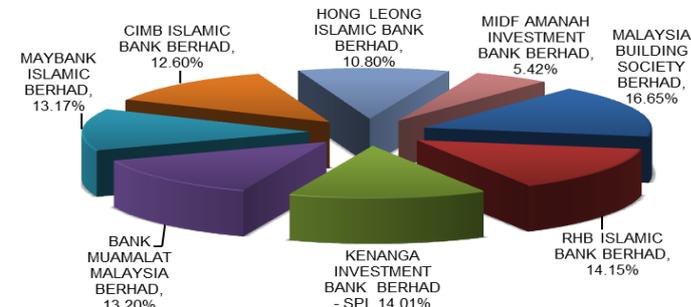

Against such a backdrop, we expect the local sukuk/bond market to remain buoyant. Factors supporting the local bond market are still abundant liquidity in the financial system and strong bidding interest in corporate sukuk/bond primary issuances, which are likely to keep the overall credit yield curve well anchored and supported.

The Fund will continue investing in short term Islamic deposits.
