MANAGER'S COMMENTS

Review

In June, trading volume in MGS has declined by 19% MoM. Nevertheless, buyers emerged across all benchmarks and narrowed the 10-yr/3-yr spread by 6.0bps MoM. There was also a strong demand for the new GII 6/20 as well as MGS 5/13's re-opening auction. Besides, moderating exports and industrial production in Apr-10 also supported the demand for MGS. Trading momentum in PDS has also declined by 15.5% MoM with RM6.27bn done. Investors are still favoring the "AAA" segment. The yield for the respective 3Y-, 5Y-, 10Y-, 20 years MGS closed at 3.15%, 3.52%, 3.91% and 4.40% respectively. The US Treasuries strengthened because of safe haven flows, concern on Europe's debt crisis threatening the global recovery, retreating housing market, and lower consumer confidence in the US.

Investment Outlook & Strategy

BNM will continue to normalize the interest rate (OPR), however not to the extreme that it will deter private sector to grow. Inflation expectation will rise with the pending abolishment of subsidies and implementation of GST. GDP will strengthen at the early part of the year but will be tapering off after the low base effect diminishes and will also challenges from the development of European debt crisis. Ringgit movement can still be volatile in the short term due to development from the yuan revaluation and European debt crisis. Short term fixed income instruments will preferred under the circumstances of normalization of interest rate and rising inflationary expectations.

The Fund will be converted to Islamic Money Market fund. Therefore, all of the funds are currently invested in short term money market instrument, namely Short Term Deposits.
